Prior to Pfeiffer University, Dr. Russell led the Intellectual Capital Transformation effort at Cisco, where he and his team received the 2014 Forrester Groundswell award for most innovative service of the year. He was Chief Information Officer for the David H. Murdock Research Institute (DHMRI) in Kannapolis, North Carolina where he provided executive leadership to drive delivery and execution of the technology requirements for developing and implementing a green-field life sciences research facility. His experience also includes several years as director of IT Strategy & Consulting with Duke Energy, leader of the Enterprise Architecture program at Bank of America, as well as technology and strategy engagements with Fortune 500 organizations (including financial services, healthcare, manufacturing, and retail), academic institutions, non- profits, and innovative startup companies. Specific areas of value include:

- American Express (Enterprise Architecture, Organizational Consulting, Assessment & Certification)
- Bank of America (Enterprise Architecture, Organizational Leadership, Coaching, Governance, Compliance)
- Duke Energy (Organizational Leadership, Coaching, Governance, Compliance)

Dr. Russell has a BA in English, and MS and PhD degrees in Education and Organizational Leadership. Ken is from Charlotte, North Carolina and lives in Wichita with his wife Ann. They have two children, Christian and Alison. He serves on the Board of Advisors for the North Carolina Biotechnology Center, is a former chairman of the Advisory Board for the UNC-Charlotte Bioinformatics Research Center, and is a member of the Board of Trustees for Pfeiffer University. He is also a member of the Cyber Security Advisory Council for the College of STEM at JC Smith University. His research has explored the impact successful leaders have on their organizations and how a leader's individual style can impact an organization's transparency.
